FAREWELL FROM THE MANAGING EDITOR

Let me use this medium to inform our contributors, readers and editors that this June edition Volume 3 No 2, 2008 will be my last issue as acting editor-in chief and the Managing editor of the Science World Journal. This is because I will soon leave Kaduna State University, where I contributed to setting up the journal in 2006, for a new post elsewhere.

The last 19 months have not been easy, and I would like to thank everyone who has supported and helped the journal to grow to what it is today. Recent analyses revealed that both the authorship and readership are growing and spreading all over the world and I am hoping that these will continue. Within the short life span of the journal, it has attracted quality articles covering a wide range of issues.

The SWJ has come to stay and to serve the scientific community. It has proved to be an important partner for the researchers in the developing countries who hitherto could not publish their work because of the unfriendly conditions imposed by the so-called 'prestigious' western journals and the publishers.
